GETTING READY FOR SUMMER CAMP

NATIONAL GUARD OFFICERS HERE LAST WEEK

A group of Michigan National Guard and Federal army officers were here last week and held a three day session at the club house. Preliminary plans for next summer's camp are in progress and everything points forward to a big year at the Hanson state military reservation.

Also Col. Kraft of the 202 Coast Artillery corps with three other officers visited the proposed aviation field at T-Town last week looking over the land and arranging to get the work of laying out the field started. They were also making arrangements for the summer camp to be held at the Hanson reservation in July. This is an anti-aircraft outfit consisting of about 700 men. While this regiment will occupy the reservation, the Detroit air squadron will have their field at T-Town. Their mission will be to tow flying targets that will be used for practice work by the coast artillery corps.

Gen. Wilson and Staff in Camp. Among the National Guard and other officers here were Maj. Gen. Guy M. Wilson, commander of the 82nd division, comprising the National Guard of Michigan and Wisconsin. He was accompanied by his staff. The personnel of the camp was as follows: Brig. Gen. John S. Scouten, commander of the 63rd brigade.

Lt. Col. Leroy Pearson, quartermaster general and chief of staff of the 32nd division.

Col. O. J. Pickert, 82nd field artillery.

Col. John S. Bersey, adjutant general.

Col. Thos. Coladay, 125th infantry.

Lt. Col. O. H. Tower, finance officer 32nd division.

Lt. Col. Glen B. Arnold, signal corps 32nd division.

Lt. Col. Jas. Sinke, G-1, 32nd division.

Lt. Col. John Franklin, G-3, 32nd division.

Lt. Col. Frank P. Borg, Lt. S. army instructor, headquarters 32nd division.

Lt. Col. Geo. C. Kiebert, Q. M. C.

Lt. Col. Geo. R. Hogarth, division adjutant.

Maj. M. S. Schillerstrom, U. S. army.

Lt. E. C. Seltzer, corps instructor on duty with new officers aviation.

The visitors made their headquarters at the officers' club with here. They left by auto Sunday afternoon.

AUTOMOBILE ORGAN BOOSTS EAST MICHIGAN

The "Headlight," the official organ of the Toledo, Ohio, Automobile club, contained an article in the May issue telling about the recreational appeal of East Michigan which was illustrated with reproductions of photos. Among the specific places mentioned in the article were Mount Clemens, Houghton Lake, Topinabee, Grayling, Port Huron, East Tawas, Rogers City, etc.

Let's hope that the nations of the world don't get into a war over disarmament.

OIL WELL: DRILLERS MAKE A GOOD START

A visit to the place where the Grayling Development Company have begun to drill for oil found the crew at work and everything going along nicely.

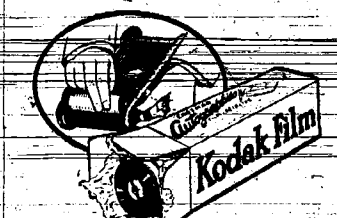

The work of sinking a heavy iron pipe, fourteen inches in diameter, goes on steadily for twenty-four hours each day. Two crews of three men each work twelve hours daily. Up to Wednesday night a depth of 150 feet have been reached or about an average of 15 feet per day since drilling operations began.

The work is under direction of Mr. B. C. Calkins of North, Baltimore, Ohio, a gentleman of large experience in the drilling of oil wells. The work on the plant began with the leaving of the snow. It was a big job as heavy machinery had to be transported from Frederic over improvised highways which are not at this time anything to brag of. An eighty-foot derrick had to be constructed and this had to be well braced and anchored in order to endure the heavy machinery and strain that is being put upon it. It required heavy timber supports and the very best of substantial carpenter work. Besides the derrick there had to be an engine room and various sheds and buildings for housing the machinery and supplies.

It required many weeks of preparation before the real drilling began. But now the work goes steadily on, and it is the hope of the people of the north that this pioneering effort may meet with great success. Should oil be found in paying quantities it would mean that there will be many more wells to follow, and also, no doubt, an oil refinery would be established in or near Grayling.

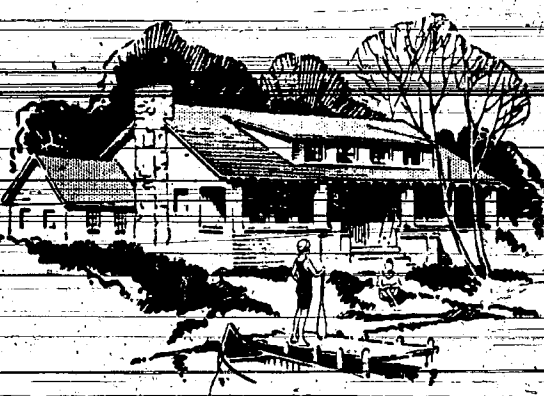

The Grayling Development Company consists of stockholders of Saling Hanson Co., and others. These men take all the chances. If they win it will mean wealth to the people of the county as well as to themselves. Should their effort fall short of success, they alone will be the losers.

Here's hoping that before many months there will be many oil gushers pouring out wealth into the pockets of the people of the north. Should this first well be a failure, two more will be sunk and an earnest effort made to find oil if there is any such thing in this section.

Summer Cottages

built this way are cool and comfortable

In no other way can so much comfort be built into a summer home for so little money as with Celotex Insulating Lumber.

This remarkable lumber, made from the long, tough fibres of cane, does what no ordinary building materials can do. It practically stops heat. It shuts out wind and moisture.

The comfortable coolness of a cottage built with Celotex is a delightful surprise. And if you want to use your cottage late in the season, Celotex will keep it snug and warm.

The cost of such a cottage is no more than the cost of one built with good lumber. Celotex is used for both exterior and interior finish. When painted, it will resist the weather quite as well as wood lumber. And it is much stronger in wall sections than wood. The broad, strong Celotex boards are easy to handle and apply. Sawed and nailed as wood lumber.

We sell and recommend Celotex. Ask us for sample and prices.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION CLASSES GIVE PAGEANT

The physical education classes of Grayling schools presented a pageant at the school gymnasium Friday night of last week, giving a very pleasing demonstration of the work that is being carried out in that line in our public schools.

While the entertainment began at 7:30 o'clock, long before that time the place was well filled with spectators. The two lower parts of "circus" songs around the big gym were occupied by children of the grades who were to take part in the exhibition, and it was an inspiration to see the tows of young boys and girls as they came marching in. Each grade was accompanied by its teacher.

The little tots of the first and second grades presented the "Shoemaker's dance" and the Danish dance of greeting. The third grade gave a German folk dance, twelve girls of the third grade danced the Virginia Reel in a manner that was very pleasing. The "Leap Frog" relay and "Skin the snake," by the boys of the fifth grade was very funny and clever. The "Ace of Diamonds" and "Knapkins" was nicely presented by the 6th and 8th B girls.

The past ball relay by the 6th grade boys was a spirited contest and very funny and the crowd enjoyed it big laugh.

The clown dance by six young girls was very nicely done. The Dutch clog "Show Me the way to go Home," by Elaine Reagan and Joyce Smith was very cleverly executed. Jane Keyport, in blackface, did the "Dixie clog," "Boo-De-Do," and would have done justice to a minstrel performer. There is something about a clog dance that always "gets" a crowd.

Sixteen high school girls gave a very fine demonstration of military marching maneuvers. Their movements were well executed and done with a lot of snap and pep.

The Finnish dance was well done by a group of high school girls, as was also the Bulgarian folk dance, also by high school girls.

A group of high school boys gave a gymnastic demonstration under direction of Mr. Burnham, teacher of physical education for the boys. They did some very clever tumbling, jumping, leaping, and other stunts. Some of the young men proved to be very clever performers. This feature was also very interesting and thrilling.

The program closed with an athletic pageant by a group of high school girls.

The entire program, except the one under direction of Mr. Burnham, was given under direction of Miss Hood, teacher of physical education. This is claimed by some to have been the best physical education demonstration ever given in Grayling, which speaks highly of the work of Miss Hood and also Mr. Burnham.

The music for the several numbers on the program was furnished by Miss Thelma Smith at the piano.

Another feature that added a lot of pleasure to the affair was the music by Mrs. Smith's orchestra. They played several numbers before the regular program and one number during the program, and each time was generously applauded.

CLEAR STREAMS COST MILLIONS

Michigan Industries Spending Huge Sums In Effort to End Pollution

SPLENDID RESULTS ALREADY ATTAINED

More than three and a half millions dollars have already been expended the past twenty months in the huge task of reclaiming the waters of Michigan.

is revealed in the statement made public today by Homer Murphy, deputy in charge of pollution, of the Department of Conservation. Of this saw the industries of the state have spent $2,625,000 in attempts to overcome water pollution, the paper mills

$2,200,000; sugar plants, $500,000;

tanning companies, $50,000; milk products concerns, $75,000; canners,

$100,000; and miscellaneous industries such as woolen mills, textile mills, chemical plants, etc., $500,000.

A portion of the above sums was spent on equipment that is actually eliminating the pollution, and some of course was spent on purely experimental work. Besides the sums already enumerated, the American Pulp and Paper Association of New York city, in a report of January, 1926, stated that more than two million dollars have been expended on research work in the United States to eliminate much of the cost, the Department of Health has combined with the Department of Conservation in the work of solving this big problem now confronting the state. Experimental stations have been established by the citizens of Kent City, the tanners at Holland, and the milk product people at Standish and Bad

Ave. The Kent City station was es-established in 1926, and experiments have reduced the polluting matter of their waste not less than 75 per cent of the composite. The tanners seem to have their problem well in hand and after gathering up the few loose ends at the experimental plant at Holland, which has been in operation since early in 1926, will be prepared to outline and build a treatment plant to handle the wastes from any type of tannery. This work should be accomplished during the present year.

Although the milk products plants are just getting under way, it is believed splendid results will be obtained during the summer months of this year. Full time chemists from state departments are aiding in the work at each of the experimental stations.

Due to the character of their business, the sugar companies seem to be facing the hardest problems. One company, last fall, undertook recir-culation of their flume water, good results being obtained. The gas companies are also confronted with difficult problem, but the entering into the work of ending pollution with a successful plan. By the installation of the proper facilities, it is believed that over one-half their pollution waste can be overcome. Many cities and villages are aiding in the work,

33 having already submitted reports on sewage disposal; 15 cities and villages have their own engineers, while 10 cities and villages are working locally on their own plans for sewage disposal.

In writing about Hospital day celebration in our last week's edition, we unintentionally omitted mentioning that the music for the dance in the evening was furnished free by Schram's orchestra. Mr. Schram and his players are always generous with their music, especially when the occasion is for charity or patriotic purposes. And the Old Fellows too are to have credit for the free use of the Temple for the dance. Something from the printing of the first lot of tickets to the sweeping out after the dance by the janitor was donated for the occasion.

Mr. R. Hanson threw a scare into some of the friends last week when the doctors reported that he was suffering from pneumonia. At the ripe age of 81 years, that disease isn't so easily thrown off, but Mr. Hanson, due to his excellent health, has come through the trouble very nicely and hopes to be able to be out again before many more days. He is able to sit up at this time and is getting along nicely.

Mr. Fuller, managing editor of the Cheboygan Daily Tribune visited our Grayling Mercy hospital a short time ago and was so impressed with its completeness of equipment and service that he wrote a two column front page article that appeared in the Cheboygan Daily Tribune in its issue of May 24. We will copy the article in our next issue of the Avalanche. Mercy hospital is one of the institutions that is keeping Grayling on the map in big letters.

The catastrophe that occurred at Bath Michigan last week when Andrew Kehoe, a maniac, dynamited the Bath Consolidated school, because "taxes were too high," was the worst in the history of Michigan. Forty-four people were killed, mostly children, between the ages of 6 and 12 were wiped out by the vengeance of this man. To accomplish his desires he planted dynamite and gunpowder under the school and exploded same by using a clock.

Bath residents have the sympathy of the people of Michigan in their sorrow. TASK OF PRUNING $80,000,000.00 BILLS LEFT TO GOVERNOR

473 New Proposals Approved By Senators Include Huge Appropriations

During the recent session of the state legislature 899 bills and 20 joint resolutions were thrown into the hopper of the legal mill. After the wheels of government had ground relentlessly on for the usually long period of four and a half months, 473 of these bills were enacted into law and four of the joint resolutions were adopted. The other proposals fell by the wayside as either removed and discarded in the law making process.

Outstanding among the measures passed by the 1927 lawmakers were the Land 3-cent gas tax, the Wade-Barlett bill amending the workmen's compensation act, the new criminal code, the school code and the traffic code.

From early in the session until almost to the end, capital punishment was one of the mooted questions continuously before the lawmakers. For the first time in the history of the state, the death penalty had been defeated in the House by narrow margins, but had never been brought before the Senate. This year the Armstrong-Patterson bill passed the House by a vote of 61 to 35 and later, in considerably amended form, was approved by the Senate with only one vote to spare. However, the Senate and the House failed to reach an agreement on several important details of the bill, so Governor Green was relieved of the perplexity and embarrassment which might have been his had he been placed in the position of having to sign or veto the death penalty proposal.

Enact New Crime Code
Though no capital punishment bill was passed, several measures to discourage crime and to secure more swift and sure justice were enacted into law. Probably the most important of these was the new crime code dealing with criminal procedure and punishment. It was a voluminous measure, codifying and simplifying a bill passed in 1917, and the new code dealing with the same subject matter. It includes several features of the famous New York Baughman criminal law. For instance, the penalty for conviction the fourth time for felony is life imprisonment.

The legislature adopted a whipping post bill, but it was promptly vetoed by the Governor, who held it would be ineffectual and serve only to give Michigan a lot of unwelcome notoriety.

Highway finance was another of the knotty problems which harassed the lawmakers during the greater part of the session. The only important bill along this line to emerge from the committee was the Leland bill, which proposed a 3-cent gas tax without making any change in the present system of automobile licenses. This passed the Senate with only three negative votes, and was once defeated by the Representatives, 46 to 50. However, it was later revived and adopted by a vote of 65 to 26.

Lobbyists in Linelight
One of the issues coming before the 1927 session was the regulation of lobbyists. Shortly after convening, both the Senate and the House passed amendments to their rules, excluding all lobbyists from the floor of the legislative chambers during the hours of the daily sessions. This didn't bother the lobbyists much, because they could still hold their lawmaking at any other time, except during the sessions and they could hear and see all that went on from their seats in the galleries.

An administration bill for the regulation of lobbyists was subjected to a dozen or so ridiculous amendments and then postponed indefinitely. A companion bill to prevent Senators or Representatives from receiving compensation in connection with the passage or defeat of pending legislation was permanently side-tracked.

During the closing hours of the session the House passed a resolution commending the lobbyists for their conduct and assistance. Probably the feature of the recent session of greatest interest to the average citizen is the huge total of the many appropriations which were granted. Budget bills with and without tax clauses, totalling approximately $80,000,000 of state funds to be expended during the next two years were approved by the legislature and sent to the Governor.

In the case of appropriation, Michigan's chief executive has the authority to veto them in their entirety or to strike out any items which he believes are unwarranted. Ever since the legislature adjourned Saturday morning, May 14, Governor Green has been busy going over these appropriation bills and using his veto pen as an axe to trim uncounted thousands of dollars from the amounts allotted by the legislature for various state institutions and departments.

taxes to be more burdensome. Although the lawmakers increased the highway tax from 2 to 3 cents and were so liberal in handling appropriations that the state general property tax for the next two years will probably be about $10,000,000 more annually than for the last two years, they failed utterly to enact any bill to relieve the growing tax burden on general property and provide a more equitable basis for bringing the mounting costs of state and local government. Many measures along this line were introduced and some made more or less progress, but interests well pleased with the present tax arrangement saw to it that they didn't get too far.

Three bills dealing with farmers' property rights were finally passed. The first was a bill requiring the owners to obtain permission of the owners of large tracts of land before they could use it for farm wood-lots adjoining. The second bill imposes severe penalties for poultry stealing and the third bill provides for a system of simple records to be kept by poultry dealers to assist in catching and convicting chicken thieves.

Michigan grades and standards of potatoes, grapes and apples were amended along lines recommended by growers' associations and the better class of dealers in these products. A truth-in-fruits-juice bill was passed to protect fruit growers against the unfair competition of manufacturers making artificial fruit juice drinks and selling them as the genuine article.

In addition to the new school code, which is largely a compilation and rearrangement of existing laws, the legislature adopted the Turner bill, appropriating $1,000,000 of special state aid for the more needy school districts.

Governor's Power Limited
Carrying out campaign promises, an administration bill was adopted limiting the Governor's power to veto acts of the state administrative board. Hitherto, the executive's veto authority has been absolute over any action of the state cabinet, but an amendment was adopted providing that five members of the board can override any such veto.

A study of 476 measures approved by the recent legislature, to say nothing of the more than 400 other proposals which were not adopted, emphasizes the fact that Michigan is a state having widely diversified problems and that members of the legislature must be men of far-vision and wide experience in order to function wisely for all parts of the state and promote its many interests and varied industries.

After having remained in session four and one-half months, a period longer than any session in many years, the lawmakers decided that their present salary of $800 per two-year term was not enough to recompense them for carrying on a primary and general election campaign and for spending 18 to 20 weeks in Lansing, so they approved a constitutional amendment to increase their salary. If approved by the voters at the November election in 1928, the pay of Senators and Representatives would be $3,000 a day for the period for which elected. This would amount to $2,190 per two-year term.

Farm Bureau Notes

"Yesterday is a dream and tomorrow is a vision, but today well live makes every yesterday a dream of happiness and every tomorrow a vision of hope. Look well, therefore, to this day. Such is the salutation of the dawn."—Anon.

Not a Bad Week

During the week beginning Monday, May 9, and closing Saturday night, May 14, the office received 27 letters, looked after state demonstration farm, made one farm call, wrote and mailed two circulars totaling 550 copies.

Anyone Want This Bull?

We will have a registered pure bred Holstein bull to land, right in the prime of life, a fine looking animal, in about a month. He is at the farm of John McGillis, on the southern county line, about 6 miles east of Rosebush. He belongs to the railroad. No expense excepting insurance which costs $7. The farmer taking him, for at least one year, improves his own stock, keeps all service fees, does not have the bother of leading his cows away. These railroad bulls have done splendidly for the farmers of the county.

No farmer need say that he could not get a start with the new to him, improvement when the county agent has such a time each year to find a home for a free, registered pure bred bull. Who wants this free bull for a year?

You Can Help Your Corn Yet

Farmers who want better corn crops can make a good start in that direction by using about a bag (125 pounds) per acre as "side dressing," or so-called "top dressing," by planting some acid phosphate on each side of the hill of corn by using the regular hand corn planter. It's well worth trying. Set planter to drop about a tablespoonful about 4 to 5 inches from the hill. It has often been tried successfully. The phosphate is cheap. Below is a little statement by an authority:

Dr. Gustafson Advises Farmers To Use a Double Dose of Phosphate on Corn

Right now is the opportune time to "Lay" fertilizer in soil fertility, according to a statement by Dr. A. F. Gustafson, extension professor of soil technology of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University. Calling attention to the present abnormally low prices of commercial fertilizer, Dr. Gustafson urges farmers to make the best of the present opportunity to build up reserves of plant food in their soil, particularly with respect to acid phosphate.

"It would appear profitable for farmers to use a double dose, he says, and recommends the use of 500 to 600 pounds of acid phosphate per acre for corn this year. The unused portion would be in the soil ready for the next year's crop of grain and clover or other seeding, Dr. Gustafson explains.

Michigan Farmers Tell Us of Benefits of Using Fertilizers by Farmers "Away Off" Here are some from near us. Perhaps you know some of these men.

$12 For Fertilizer Applied To Potatoes Returns $38 Profit

Michigan Tests Credit Plant Food With Marked Effect on Yield, Quality and Profit

Fifteen tests conducted by H. C. Moore, Michigan potato specialist, show that the use of fertilizer on potatoes returns a profit of $38 for every $12 invested.

You can't look at a tire and tell how far it will run

YOU CAN'T SEE a tire carcass because it is covered by the tread. Yet the way this carcass is built tells how far the tire will run.

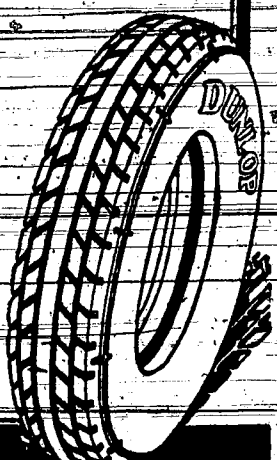

Dunlop has had 39 years to learn all the hidden points where tires wear. Dunlop carcasses are built from the best long fibre cotton, spun in Dunlop's own mills into the famous Dunlop cable-twist cord.

These cords are elastic, so they give and take as your tire runs; strong, so they resist constant load and pounding. They build the best possible foundation for the Dunlop tread—the toughest rubber development known.

Thus Dunlop's extra years of experience build added value into every vital fire-part. That is why, not one Dunlop—but every Dunlop—gives you more service than you can reasonably expect.

We recommend that you put Dunlops on your car with fertilizer on potatoes under farm conditions last summer gave an average increase of 50.9 bushels per acre, which was approximately $2.50 a bushel, the average gross return per acre was $51 more on fertilized than on unfertilized land. The average cost of the fertilizer used was $12, making the net return for fertilizer $39.9 per acre. A 3-12-4 fertilizer was used in these tests.

An experiment on the farm of L. D. Hoxie in Antrim county gave an increase of 83.9 bushels from the use of 400 pounds of fertilizer per acre, the fertilized part of the field yielding 306.5 bushels an acre and the unfertilized only 222.6 bushels.

A 600-pound per acre application in Antrim county on the farm of William Greenman increased the yield from 284.5 to 441 bushels per acre, the highest record of the experiments.

Besides the increase in yield in these tests, a marked improvement of quality was noted. In a typical example, 300 pounds of potatoes (field run) from both fertilized and unfertilized plots were carefully graded into No. 1s, No. 2s, and No. 3s. The fertilized potatoes graded 275 pounds No. 1, 24 pounds No. 2 and 1 pound No. 3. The unfertilized potatoes graded only 197 pounds No. 1, 34 pounds No. 2 and 19 pounds No. 3. Fertilization also tended to mature the crop earlier, giving a better color, according to Professor Moore.

Of the 91 potato growers in Pennsylvania, 70 were made eligible for membership in the 100 bushel club in that state last year, approximately 70 purchased certified Michigan seed of the Russet Rural variety. The high man, Ray Briggs, who produced 688 bushels per acre in 1926, used Michigan seed, and 1,000 pounds of 4-8-0 in the row.

Corn and Crows
I wish that I could get letters, right away, from people who had found a good way to keep crows from injuring newly planted corn fields. I would like to print these ideas in next week's Farm Bureau Notes. This week has been in this week as well as last. My mistake.

Not Too Late for Lime

Please do not think that the chance to use lime is gone, just because you did not get in on it early this spring. The fact is, it will be a good time to haul and to apply lime any day this year.

You can summer fallow a field this spring and summer, to free it of weeds, including quack grass, and put on lime early in August, then sow sweet clover, and still not be late. You can summer fallow all summer and apply lime after snow comes. Thus, your lime will be dissolving and be ready for an early start next spring.

That 25 per cent increase stuff "I" have recently sent the little letter to you, asking you to let me know if you are coming in making the farm pay a 25 per cent increase in income this year.

This is the second time I have sent it this spring to each of our farmers. What I am interested in is "What do you find of interest in the list of ways given to get this 25 per cent increase?" Must be something there, or the list must suggest something to you.

Asparagus and Cottage Cheese

Are you taking in a nice little income from the sale of asparagus? Could be done. Are you taking in a nice little income from the sale of well-made cottage cheese? Could be done. When delivering to customers, you could, at same time, sell buttermilk, cottage cheese, tomatoes, parsnips, and eggs, on the same trip. Lots of business chances for income that Crawford county farmers are not using.

Big, plump pie plant, could, right now, be added to the above list. With a headless burn placed over each hill of pie plant sometime ago, and a wheelbarrow of fresh horse manure around the outside of barrel, you would have been selling plump pie plant for two weeks or more.

Some Folks Do

Some folks do not use enough fertilizer per acre. They think that they can get along with a little less. They are wrong. They should use the fertilizer that they get benefit from. They blame the fertilizer and those who persuaded them to use it.

Can you get up steam in the threshing engine with an armful of wood? Can you haul the teakettle with a handful of toothpicks? Use too little and you waste all you did use.

One of Our Professors Recommends It

Prof. C. E. Miller, of the soils department of Michigan Agricultural College, emphasizes that the way to grow large yields of corn at a low cost per bushel is to supply the soil with an abundance of plant food, either in the form of manure or commercial fertilizer, or both.

"A properly balanced fertilizer will hasten the growth and maturity of the crop," writes Professor Miller, "thus avoiding frost injury and giving a better quality of grain. Late planting made advisable to avoid corn borers injury may be compensated to considerable extent by suitable fertilization."

Professor Miller also states that the application of fertilizer in the corn hill neither limits nor restricts developments of the corn roots.

BUREAU TO HELP FARMERS WITH SEED

Based on a report from L. L. Drake, agricultural agent for Northeastern Michigan, A. F. Marston, secretary of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau, has authorized Tuesday by the executive committee of the bureau to set aside $2,000 to be used as a revolving fund in the purchase of hardigan alfalfa seed, this seed to be advanced to those farmers in northeastern Michigan, who, under the approval and direction of Mr. Drake, would engage in the raising and sale of hardigan seed.

The meeting of the executive committee of the bureau was held at the office of the development bureau in Bay City, May 17th. Herman Lundén of Gaylord and Lewis, president of the bureau, presided.

T. F. Marston, secretary-manager of the bureau, reviewed activities of the bureau, along agricultural and tourist lines, and outlined progress in the program adopted at the annual meeting of the bureau March 17.

Several of the committee members commended the splendid results from the tour of the Michigan Central railroad alfalfa train in the district recently. The members of the executive committee, who are concretely interested in the tourist and resort industry, discussed the reports of the activities of the bureau in cooperation with the East Michigan Tourist association.

It was decided at the meeting to confer with the officials of the Automobile club of Northern Michigan, in an effort to secure a branch of the club at the development bureau and tourist headquarters. The new location of the club headquarters of the two organizations is receiving requests in great numbers for information regarding road conditions and road logs from visitors from other sections of the state and from other states.

Under present conditions it is necessary to send these inquiries to the automobile club headquarters for this information and the executive committee feel that a branch office of the automobile club in the log cabin would not only contribute to the efficiency of the organization but also would give better service to visitors.

It was decided to hold the next meeting of the executive committee at Gaylord sometime in the late summer. Newspaper men of Northeastern Michigan will be the guests of the development bureau at this meeting.

The suggestion of holding regional meetings throughout the district was also discussed and it is probable that some meetings will be planned. The scheduled tour of an American Red Cross expert into East Michigan in July was discussed and the executive committee of the bureau will be the guests of the American Red Cross life-saving expert has been assigned to this section in summer. The proposed tour will start at Post-Huron and will include stops on M-10 and M-14, ending at Houghton Lake.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL RESUME

By William McMahon of New York Institute of Financial Research, Inc.

There is better this week in spite of the gloom. The best reports come from the Central Mississippi Valley and the Middle Atlantic States. Best crop reports come from the Pacific coast, Kansas, Oklahoma, and North Western Louisiana. Parts of the Northwest and the South Atlantic areas are also good.

Business is without material change. Industry shows a certain stability, fluctuating only slightly. Such declines as have occurred and are occurring are less marked than a year ago, while gains are proportionately greater.

The securities market moved high this week. Some of the trading seemed to be lacking in business, although this is not an unusual aspect in market operations, but sanity and discrimination will ensue, as they have the habit of doing. There is no general and widespread bearish force at work. The market leaders, some of them already too high, may go higher. But the more deserving issues are bound to come into their own.

Railroads are having hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the new Van Sweringen plan. If the commission should approve the new merger plans, all the benefits and the stocks go higher, for then there will be announcements of other consolidation programs. But if the commission should not approve the plans, railroad stocks will decline.

Some of the steel stocks are good to hold or buy. There is now the normal seasonal slackening in steel operations but buying by the automobile companies is unusually heavy. Building and construction activities have not declined and this industry will buy steel through the spring and summer.

There is no sign of any important liquidation of stocks by big interests. There are many pool movements afoot, but they should be avoided for such are but traps into which the unwary fall. Money is cheap, industrial units are demonstrating good earnings power, and there is a likelihood of lower taxes. These are important factors. As summer approaches the stock market will display some fluctuations and hesitations from time to time, reflecting the course of business. But operations should be individual. That is, a stock should be bought or sold at this time purely and absolutely according to individual merit or demerit.

VALUE OF PUBLICITY

Instead of giving out facts about our industries, under compulsion, as a sop to the public, many of our large corporations recognize publicity as a legitimate and vital means of retaining the confidence of the public. Any business man who wants to keep the facts of his business to himself still has the right to do so. He may protect that right by the simple expedient of keeping his business so small that whatever he may do will be of public consequence. In that position, if he attempts to push prices too far up or wages too far down, he finds himself without customers or workers. This price for his secrecy is, obviously more than the right it maintains is worth. Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman, United States Steel Corporation.

It's a good thing for the manufacturers that we don't treat automobiles like the old folks did the one-horse shay.

MAINTENANCE—WHY?

By County Nurse

More attention is paid in the United States to automobiles than to food according to bureau of census figures. An analysis of statistics issued by the department of labor also shows that where incomes are small, the proportion spent on food is too little. It is estimated by nutrition experts that the minimum amount for diet to maintain health is just under half of the earnings, if these are low, whereas the ratio indicates that, approximately, but a third is actually spent.

Apparently, then, people would rather economize on diet than do without a car. The result must be malnutrition with its attendant ill effects. Facts appear to show that this is so.

A survey of 22,000,000 American school children, for instance, was made not so long ago and, according to Dr. Herman J. Norton, 75 per cent had physical defects. That is to say, that three-quarters of them suffered in one way or another. It is a fact that should make parents think. So closely allied with diet and health that malnutrition oftentimes means trouble with eyes, or teeth, or skin, or the nervous system, or other organs of the body. Let us see just why. Certain mineral elements are essential to tissue as the vitamins, tables, especially the green ones, as well as in milk, eggs, butter, and cheese, are essential to vigor and tone. Without the lime found in milk, teeth and bones suffer as well as the blood and without Vitamin A, also found in this food as in those enumerated, the lungs, bladder, skin and ears are all likely to be affected. Eye trouble may also be a result of lack of Vitamin A.

Every cell of the body needs phosphorus as the blood needs iron. The only source is through foods such as eggs, meat, whole wheat and potatoes.

Definite nerve trouble develops without a supply of Vitamin B, again found in milk, whole, cereal foods, fresh vegetables and fruits. Another food deficiency as when Vitamin C, present in raw cabbage, lettuce, oranges, lemons, spinach and tomatoes, whether raw or canned, is lacking results in scurvy. By eating just a few of the important foods that contain most body necessities, trouble is saved.

When the food we eat does not supply enough power for energy, there is a general feeling of weariness. Our most economical energy foods are starches and sugars and fats. But there is not as much danger from lack of these as from lack of the vitamin foods. Most people eat too many starchy viands and too few fruits and green vegetables. That may be why there is so much indigestion and constipation. Food values have to be understood to insure a balanced diet.

A nutritionist has been specially trained to understand these. She passes on her knowledge to the wife and mother and such a one would never allow economy on food at the expense of health.

PEOPLE AID FLOOD-SUFFERERS

The suffering and distress which have come to our people in the South by reason of the floods has touched the heart of the country. Not only was the original Red Cross fund of $5,000,000 which President Coolidge asked for subscribed in short order, but his plea for a day of collection, amounting to $1,000,000, has been answered. The Federal government itself, through the President, has already made large appropriations through the army and other official bodies in the way of supplies, clothing and protection.

The President has been known to give serious consideration to the possibility of calling an extra session of Congress to vote an even larger amount of relief. His advisors, including senators from certain Southern states, felt obliged to counsel him that the situation was so pressing and imminent that the normal delay which would occur before Congress could be assembled would be the effectiveness of the appropriation if made. Hence, the decision to postpone that effort until the December session, when flood relief and control will be made the outstanding feature of the President's message.

GASOLINE STATIONS AND HOT DOG STANDS

One of the Philadelphia dailies draws a comparison between the appearance of the gasoline stations and the hot dog stands. The stations usually being a beauty spot while the hot dog stands are so crude as to be most unsightly.

Like so many other present day conditions, the automobile is responsible for the existence of both. The difference in the appearance is due to the difference in the amount of capital back of these enterprises. The oil stations are built by wealthy companies, who often have to pay an enormous sum to obtain the desired location and they build attractively in order to be a credit to the neighborhood, while the hot dog stand appears in any nook along a much traveled highway and whose proprietor as a rule has only money to buy a supply of soft drinks, hot dogs, etc.

But the question of beautifying the hot dog stand is worth considering for the worth-while movement of aiding nature rather than detracting from its beauty is spreading rapidly and that hot dog vender, who will have an attractive setting for his wares is the one who will continue in business.

Barbette's and brandishing a revolver, ran between Christie and her protectors and caught her up with his free arm.

Had the confusion been less, and the uncertainty light been less certain, Selwood would have been at a loss to recognize this man; the commonest instinct in the nature of men would have declared Starbuck to him in the man, assailing Christie. He did not realize that smoke was now rising about Barbette's place, that Pardaloe had made good his threat to burn it, and that the men running out of the door were crying "Fire!" He had eyes for no one, but Starbuck and heard nothing but Christie's angry, rebellious cries as she struggled to free herself. And he ran toward her with an answering cry.

Starbuck saw him leap into the street and, still holding the frantic girl, he brought down his gun like a flash on Selwood.

It was a reckless, a useless shot. With Christie fighting him with her "paw" fists, the bullet flew wide. Not deigning to reply, not even drawing his own gun, but maddened to fury, Selwood dashed forward; before Starbuck could put up and cover the second time, the gambler was on him, but Selwood had caught Christie by the wrist and was dragging her away. She screamed at him and resisted him. She tried to get back to where she knew a deadly moment had come between the man she hated and the man she loved; but she could not.

Pardaloe, like a beleaguered giant, had shaken off his enemies, recovered his shotgun, and above the sputtering crack of revolvers, his four-sounded on Christie's ears. Then, clucking the gun and shouting imprecations at his enemies, the mule boss swept an open space between them and the two men who, locked in a death struggle, rolled in the middle of the street. Despite a terrific blow across the head from the flat of Selwood's revolver, Starbuck's weight and bulk had borne the gambler to the ground; and Starbuck, to avoid a fatal dexterity with the same revolver, had clinched with him.

Neither of the infuriated men—enslaved to death grips—wasted another instant trying to shoot. Starbuck had a further resource; he knew that it was the deadliest of weapons in a clinch. He knew as grips, like light blows, shifted, eyes strained in fury, blows rained remorselessly, and the game of life and death slipped from hand to hand, precisely what Starbuck was trying to do—he knew almost precisely where the heavier man carried the coveted weapon, and now not one man but two were exhausting every resource of strength and strategy to reach the half of Starbuck's bowie-knife at his hip.

It was an unequal struggle. Starbuck's weight and strength almost continually overbore the gambler's agility. Each advantage for the moment was gained by Selwood was soon lost to the heavier defense of Starbuck. With Pardaloe's piercing eyes taking note of every turn, he could see but one hope for the lighter man; a hope that vanished when Selwood seemed weakening. If Starbuck's wind should outlast the other Selwood, Pardaloe told himself, could not win.

So deep had become this conviction that more than once Pardaloe would have interfered, would have knuckled Starbuck on the head or rammed him with his gun-stock—would have taken for himself the badge of disgrace from the wrought-up reamsters watching—had he not, known that Selwood, living or dead, would never forgive a friend put on the bed by the aid of a friend. With hungry eyes and ears, the powerful mule boss watched the doubtful issue and listened to the sharp broken-breaths of the struggling men. But again and again Starbuck would roll his enemy under, only to have him spring free and slip himself out.

The contest fast narrowed to one point—the possession of the knife. Pardaloe saw and he understood; his fingers itched and his muscles twitched in his fever to pass his own knife into Selwood's hands, and at most as if timed to the last moment of the encounter, Starbuck, once more freeing his right hand, restrained till then by Selwood's left, slipped it from the grasp of muscles, and whipped out his knife.

But in gaining this deadly advantage he had laid himself open to an unlooked-for danger. As a boxer, defeated in every tactic of defense, seeking himself going and tenses to the attack, Selwood's right hand, releasing Starbuck's left, shot out and clutched Starbuck's wrist. The gambler's right hand, coming from under Starbuck's arm, threw himself across his enemy and over the arm, slashing at him with the knife. Pardaloe, wild with anxiety, knew the end was in sight. But could Starbuck inflict a fatal injury before he should succumb to the grip that had cut off his breath?

Throwing himself frantically about as he felt consciousness going, striking blindly at Selwood from the forearm, Starbuck tried to land a fatal thrust. But Selwood, as Starbuck, plunging and rearing, slammed him from side to side to shake loose the deadly grip—told the slashing as he could, clinging all the while like a mule to the throat of his foe.

Above the din about him, Pardaloe shouted and yelled. Hope had returned. He saw how the fight went. And, stamping his clumsy feet in a frenzy, he watched Selwood's left elbow gradually straighten and saw his left hand slide slowly, unevenly, but certainly up to Starbuck's right wrist. Again the two men meshed.

Pardaloe could see their straining muscles shiver in a climax of struggle. Then, Selwood had wrested the half of the knife from his strangled foe, let go his throat, and raised his arm to strike.

Not till then did Pardaloe jump in. He caught the upflung arm. The gambler, covered with blood, looked angrily at him. "Not yet, John," cried the big fellow, low and ferociously. "Hang him!"

Panting as if dazed, Selwood looked again to see who spoke. The voice that entered his ear, well he knew, was to his brain. He shook his head, matted hair that felt before his eyes Pardaloe, gripping his arm, looked intently at him and repeated the words. Whether Selwood understood or not, he knew Pardaloe. He looked down on his gasping enemy, and stretching out his left hand, laid the ugly knife in Pardaloe's hand.

With a cracked laugh, he staggered to his feet, groping about with his hands for support. Pardaloe steadied him. "Cut much, John?" he asked, bending anxiously over him.

"Why—no." Trying to pull himself together, Selwood pointed the words "I guess—no."

"You're clipped a little," commented Pardaloe, taking hold of his blood-soaked left arm and peering with melancholy sympathy into the strained eyes.

With the fingers of his left hand, Selwood felt around his head. "One jab," he said, breathing hard. "I thought went through me. My grip must have slipped," he added, as his fingers ran vacantly over his chest, trying to find a particular spot, "or something—turned the knife. What's here, Bill?" he asked, feeling blindly at the shirt-pocket of his woolen shirt.

Pardaloe set down his lantern, and, using both hands on the slashed pocket, succeeded in fishing out the remains of a pack of cards. He stooped to examine the cards by the light of the lantern; the point of Starbuck's knife had gone half way through them. "My cards, by gum!" exclaimed Pardaloe, as his face fell. "Plum" cut to pieces, too. "That deck ain't worth sticks to nobody now—look at 'em!"

He held the deck up for inspection and looked indignantly down at Starbuck, whose wrists and ankles were already bound by Pardaloe and Scott. "No matter, old boy," he growled; "we'll fix you in a minute so you won't cut up no more cards for nobody."

Such of Starbuck's following as could escape the clutches of Lefever's angry men were scattering in the thickets along the river, where most of them had horses hidden, and by forcing or swimming the stream could spur out on the banks for Calumet.

Smoke was billowing from the doors and windows of Barbette's place. Flames were licking for the last time the interior of the empty barroom and licking its evil trappings. Selwood, stood by Pardaloe, looked blankly at the scene before him and backed away.

The gamblers were dragging out their pursuers. In the crowd that closed in on the scene there rose up a man, and a confusion of orders as to how Starbuck should be disposed of. In the midst of the shouting, jostling throng, Selwood stood once more triumphant. When a cry arose to run Starbuck to a trap, he was intercepted. "Hands off," he said. "This man is my prisoner. Take him to the barn, Pardaloe, with the others and hold him till I get there."
